1. ASA Social Media Pre-Conference Workshop. The Integrative Use of Social Media to Reach Publics

Session Organizer: Dustin Kidd, Temple University
Leader: Lester H. Andrist, University of Maryland
This workshop will examine how to use multiple social media sites in a more integrated fashion. The workshop will include simple points about how to simultaneously post onto multiple social media sites, as well as tips on how to encourage your audience to find and follow you on all your platforms. A second point worth making is what type of content can be posted (images, videos, quotes, etc.). Finally, a more interesting part of the workshop would examine why it is important to have multiple social media sites. 1) There is an issue of format to consider. Different sites are simply better suited for displaying different types of media. 2) Different sites are better suited for dispersing different types of media. The fact that different algorithms are utilized by different social media platforms means that there is no single type of post that will go viral. 3) Different audiences use different social media platforms, so it is necessary to use multiple platforms to engage different publics.

2. ASA Social Media Pre-Conference Workshop. Sociological Blogs on WordPress

Session Organizer: Dustin Kidd, Temple University
Leader: Nathan Scott Palmer, Georgia Southern University
This workshop takes academic attendees through the basic steps of establishing a blog — an online space to highlight their research and accomplishments. Participants will consider the merits of various free plug-and-play blogging platforms like WordPress.com and Tumblr. While each has its merits, we’ll delve into WordPress.com during this session, including the following skills: • Creating a WordPress.com account • Writing a post, title and excerpt for each entry • Uploading and/or embedding media (photographs and PDFs) • Hyperlinking to your work • Changing design themes; and updating or editing posts (Space is limited to 20 participants.)

3. ASA Social Media Pre-Conference Workshop. Facebook Groups and Pages for Research and Teaching

Session Organizer: Dustin Kidd, Temple University
Leader: Tristan Bridges, State University of New York-Brockport
This workshop explores how we can better integrate Facebook into our sociological practice. It is the most widely used social media platform by far. In this workshop, we will explore the merits of using Facebook Group for sharing research and teaching, Facebook personal profiles, Facebook organizational profiles, and Facebook book pages. These Facebook services can be incorporated into learning environments and collaborative research.

4. Course. Affect Control Theory: Empirical Quantitative Approaches to Studying Emotions CANCELLED

12:30 pm  Sessions

5. ASA Social Media Pre-Conference Workshop. Generating and Engaging an Audience

Session Organizer: Dustin Kidd, Temple University
Leader: Dustin Kidd, Temple University
How do you get people to pay attention to your posts? Good content is key but there is more to it than that. This workshop explores the best methods for reaching a wide audience that includes journalists, social activists, and policy makers. We will discuss the role that following others plays in building your own following, and the appropriate ways to create interaction with others through social media.

6. ASA Social Media Pre-Conference Workshop. Sharing Sociology with Pinterest

Session Organizer: Dustin Kidd, Temple University
Co-Leaders: Lester H. Andrist, University of Maryland
Valerie L. Chepp, Hamline University
How can we teach and share sociology through Pinterest? This workshop will briefly cover how to navigate the technical features Pinterest offers. It will also discuss best practices in terms of building and participating in a sociological community with Pinterest. There are downsides and competencies that the platform offers, all of which will be discussed.

7. ASA Social Media Pre-Conference Workshop. Twitter for Academics

Session Organizer: Dustin Kidd, Temple University
Leader: Jessie Daniels, City University of New York-Graduate Center
In this hands-on workshop, we’ll work with Twitter, taking the steps necessary to establish your academic brand presence on this social media platform. We’ll explore the following skills: • Selecting an appropriate user ID or “handle” • Creating a useful Twitter profile • Writing style when limited to 140 characters • Following other Twitter personalities • Retweeting tweets and direct messaging • Integrating your Twitter presence into your WordPress.com blog

8. Course. Taking Sociological Research Public: How to Become a News Source (and When Not To)
Session Organizer: Stephanie Coontz, Evergreen State College
Leader: Stephanie Coontz, Evergreen State College
This 4-hour course offers hands-on interactive training in how to frame work for a general audience, write for the larger public, and deal with the press and media. I will discuss how to become a news source (and when not to be one), how to get quoted, and how to minimize the chances of being misquoted. Participants will work on identifying what parts of their work will most interest a broader audience (this is often not what interests fellow specialists). We will practice developing clear take-away points and constructing a clear narrative frame. We will also discuss how to find broader news hooks for people's research results and how to pitch a story to a journalist. For this course we will pay particular attention to crafting op ed pieces, which are an excellent way to carry scholarly research into the public arena and establish a scholar or researcher as a news source. But we will also examine the differing needs and constraints of print media, radio shows, and television, and explore strategies for staying on message in each venue. I will offer tips on how to pass the secret audition lurking behind every pre-interview, how to answer questions effectively, and the importance of body language (even over the phone). I will also pose questions to course participants, record their answers, and ask the group as a whole to help each member figure out how to answer them more persuasively.

10. ASA Social Media Pre-Conference Workshop 07. Collaborative Blogging
Session Organizer: Dustin Kidd, Temple University
Leader: Tristan Bridges, State University of New York-Brockport
A number of academics now collaborate in blogging communities. In this workshop, Tristan Bridges will share his experiences with both Girl with Pen and Feminist Reflections. How do you set up and manage an online blogging community? Who is the audience for these communities and how to effectively reach that audience.

11. ASA Social Media Pre-Conference Workshop 08. Social Media Practices in the Classroom
Session Organizer: Dustin Kidd, Temple University
Leader: Dustin Kidd, Temple University
This workshop focuses on the pedagogy of social media with a focus on the issue of digital literacy. Despite claims to the contrary, evidence shows that our students are not digital natives. How can we teach them the best practices for effectively communicating through social media? How can social media impact their studies, their social activism, and their careers? We will focus on Twitter, Tumblr, Pinterest, and LinkedIn.

12. ASA Social Media Pre-Conference Workshop 09. Framing Sociological Research for Social Media
Session Organizer: Dustin Kidd, Temple University
Leader: Nathan Scott Palmer, Georgia Southern University
This workshop explores the process of telling stories with our data that the public wants to read and can easily understand. This workshop presents the best practices identified in the literature (for instance see Pinker's (2014) The Sense of Style). Any professional academic can learn how to tweet, but learning how to translate your research written in academese into a human readable format is exceptionally hard. This style of writing is not taught in grad school and opportunities for this style of writing are not structured into most academic careers.

13. Opening Plenary Session. Abortion in America: A Discussion with the Only Doctor Providing Abortions in Mississippi and Three Sociologists
Session Organizer: Paula England, New York University
Presider: Paula England, New York University
Panelists: Willie Parker, M.D., Jackson Women's Health Organization; S. Philip Morgan, University of North Carolina-Chapel Hill; Zakiya T. Luna, University of California-Santa Barbara; Sarah K. Cowan, New York University
Abortion was enshrined as a legal right with the Supreme Court's 1973 decision. Yet legislatures pass and courts permit some restrictions, large geographical areas have no abortion providers, and political conflict rages. After a brief introduction to relevant trends by demographer Phil Morgan, the featured speaker will be Dr. Willie Parker, the only doctor providing abortions in Mississippi. He will discuss the struggles entailed in doing this work, and what he has learned about the lives of the women that seek abortions. Following his talk, two sociologists will provide brief accounts of their relevant research. Zakiya Luna will discuss the reproductive justice movement, which engages in cross-movement organizing to achieve a world where people have access to abortion as well as support for having children and parenting with dignity. Sarah K. Cowan will highlight how abortions are discussed—or kept secret—in social networks, and how this can affect political opinion. Audience members will then join in a discussion with Dr. Parker and the panelists.

14. Thematic Session. Children and Sexuality
Session Organizer: Karin A. Martin, University of Michigan
Presider: Karin A. Martin, University of Michigan
Panelists: Karin A. Martin, University of Michigan
 C. Shawn McGuffey, Boston College
 Amy T. Schalet, University of Massachusetts-Amherst
While the study of sexuality is a robust field, the sociological study of the relationship of children to sexuality is small. In this session, presenters explore three areas of research in childhood sexuality. C. Shawn McGuffey will examine how gender, sexuality, and race shape parental responses to child sexual abuse and discuss findings from his forthcoming book, Blaming Mothers: Gender, Race, and Male Child Sexual Abuse. Amy Schalet will examine how culture shapes children's sexuality. Karin Martin has studied gender and sexuality in childhood for nearly two decades. She has established a line of scholarship on young children’s sexual socialization and will discuss understandings of sexuality among preschoolers.

15. Thematic Session. Organizational Responsibility, Culpability and Gender Inequality
Session Organizer: Vincent J. Roscigno, The Ohio State University
Presider: Vincent J. Roscigno, The Ohio State University
Panelists: Laura Beth Nielsen, American Bar Foundation and Northwestern University
 Robin J. Ely, Harvard University
 Reginald Anthony Byron, Southwestern University
 Alexandra Kalev, Tel Aviv University
From high visibility sexual harassment and abuse scandals in higher education and the military, to ongoing gender discrimination in workplaces, to efforts aimed at negotiating a more reasonable and fair work-family balance, it is clear that social science accounts require much more attention to the ways in which organizational structures and processes often play a pivotal role in exacerbating or mitigating gender power differentials and inequalities. This session brings together four leading scholars who have undertaken important and cutting-edge theoretical and empirical work on gender and organizational dynamics with implications across a host of institutional domains. Building on their own work, they will discuss the ways in which organizations themselves are actors in the making or undoing of hierarchical gender relations.

16. Thematic Session. Sexual Fluidity
Session Organizer: Verta A. Taylor, University of California-Santa Barbara Presider: Verta A. Taylor, University of California-Santa Barbara
Panelists: Lisa Diamond, University of Utah
Leila J. Rupp, University of California
E. Patrick Johnson, Northwestern University
Jane Ward, University of California-Riverside
For a sizable number of people love, desire, and sexual behavior are not rigidly homosexual or heterosexual but fluid, changing as they move through different stages of life, various social groups, and, most important, intimate relationships. Panelists will discuss gendered and racialized forms of sexual fluidity and the relationship between sexual fluidity and non-binary sexual identities, such as bisexual, bi-curious, heteroflexible, and queer.

17. Thematic Session. Social Movements and the Politics of Reproductive Justice
Session Organizer: Zakiya T. Luna, University of California-Santa Barbara
Presider: Zakiya T. Luna, University of California-Santa Barbara
Panelists: Emily S. Mann, University of South Carolina
Sujatha Jesudason, University of California-San Francisco and CoreAlign
Dorothy E. Roberts, University of Pennsylvania
Zakiya T. Luna, University of California-Santa Barbara
How does considering the interactional effects of race, age, class, sexuality, and ability shift our understanding of reproduction? Continuing political and legal attacks on reproductive rights have myriad effects and responses besides those most visible in the media. This panel will examine how the historically constraining legal and social movement emphasis on reproductive rights and health is shifting to a holistic reproductive justice, which draws on multiple social justice movements and centers intersecting inequalities. Panelists will highlight various examples of communities innovatively challenging reproductive inequality and the meaning for the future of reproductive rights, health and justice.

18. Thematic Session. The Military and Sexuality
Session Organizer: David R. Segal, University of Maryland
Presider: David R. Segal, University of Maryland
Life Course Perspectives on Military Serve, Gender, and Extramarital Sex. Andrew S. London, Syracuse University; Janet M. Wilmoth, Syracuse University
Sexual Assault Reporting at U.S. Service Academies. Judith E. Rosenstein, United States Naval Academy; Karin Modesto De Angelis, U.S. Air Force Academy
Open Gender Transition in the U.S. Military: A Revelatory Case Study. James E. Parco, Colorado College; David A. Levy, U.S. Air Force Academy; Sarah R. Spears, American Civil Liberties Union
Same Sex Families in the United States Military. Karin Modesto De Angelis, U.S. Air Force Academy; David Smith, U.S. Naval Academy
Some issues at the intersection of the military and sexuality have been longstanding, such as infidelity among deployed troops and their spouses. Others are in the current news almost daily, such as sexual assault (particularly at the service academies) and the integration of women in combat units (which is the subject of a separate presidential session). There is an emerging literature on the impact of the recent lifting of the ban on gays serving openly, but there remain unresolved issues, such as the adaptation of the military to same sex families.

19. Special Session. The Complex Relationships between Gender and Economic Inequality
Session Organizer: Stephanie Coontz, Evergreen State College
Presider: Stephanie Coontz, Evergreen State College
Panelists: Philip N. Cohen, University of Maryland-College Park
John Schmitt, Center for Economic and Policy Research
Leslie McCall, Northwestern University
Shawn Fremstad, Center for American Progress
This session investigates the interaction and interplay between gender and economic inequality. Sociologist Philip Cohen examines trends in the 50 largest labor markets to see how changes in overall earnings inequality affect changes in inequality between men and women. Economist John Schmitt discusses how the fall in employment rates for men and rise for women are related to different treatment of men and women by such institutions as the military, incarceration, the EITC, AFDC/TANF, and post-secondary education. Sociologist Leslie McCall discusses class and racial differences in marriage benefits and marriage burdens for women. Economist Shawn Fremstad investigates the interactions between gender and class changes in their impact on family structure, stability and child outcomes.

20. Policy and Research Workshop. Advancing Sexual Self-Advocacy for People with Disabilities
Session Organizer: Thomas P. Horejes, DEAF Inc.
Co-Leaders: Katie Arnold, University of Illinois-Chicago
Linda Sandman, University of Illinois-Chicago
Cathy Saunders, Illinois Imagines
Rebekah Moras, University of Illinois-Chicago
Presider: Thomas P. Horejes, DEAF Inc.
Many people with disabilities experience profound marginalization in multiple human rights domains, including disparities in sexual and reproductive health. There are a number of ethical considerations that have shaped how the sexuality of people with disabilities has been viewed. This workshop, in collaboration between the Sexuality & Disability Consortium of the Institute on Disability and Human Development (IDHD) and the University of Illinois at Chicago, will address the rights to sexual citizenship of people with disabilities and ways to advance sexual self-advocacy. Sexual citizenship is a concept that challenges us to expand our idea of sexuality to include marginalized and disenfranchised groups. While the United States has a strong tradition of disability rights, existing sexual policies and practices with regards to people with disabilities remain inadequate, underfunded and under researched. There are four goals for this workshop: 1) To understand the concept of sexual citizenship and how it applies to the disability community, 2) to identify unique barriers that marginalize people with disabilities regarding their sexual health, 3) to identify strategies to empower people with disabilities through sexual self-advocacy and to begin breaking down barriers such as stigma and oppression, and 4) to identify at least three resources for promoting sexual health among people with disabilities that can be incorporated into an action plan developed by participants.

Session Organizer: Nancy A. Greenwood, Indiana University-Kokomo
Leader: Nancy A. Greenwood, Indiana University-Kokomo
Co-Leader: Stephanie Medley-Rath, Indiana University-Kokomo
The goal of this workshop is to help new instructors who are teaching introductory sociology explore ways of designing and adapting this course to better fit with student needs, their school’s sociology program goals, as well as the ASA recommended Learning Goals for the Major. We will discuss ideas from the SoTL literature about both content and pedagogies for this course. We will examine how introductory sociology can function as a course in the general education core, as a diversity course, and as an introduction to the major in sociology. We will also discuss course design and adapting instructor and program course goals as well as assessment of student learning. Participants are encouraged to share and bring issues or questions they would like to discuss.

39. Presidential Panel. Birth Control in America
Session Organizer: Paula England, New York University

Presider: Sarah R. Hayford, Arizona State University
Panelists: Jennifer S. Barber, University of Michigan
Kathryn J. Edin, Johns Hopkins University
Martha Bailey, University of Michigan
Prior to the 1980s, neither abortion nor hormonal contraception was available in the U.S. for most women. Changes in state laws and US Supreme Court decisions brought greater availability, though unevenly by state and year. Today most women have access to and have used birth control, yet nearly half of pregnancies are unintended according to the women. Unintended pregnancies are concentrated among women with low income and education. Bailey considers the effects that the availability of birth control has had on women’s education and careers since the 1960s—and, by implication, on gender inequality. Barber shares findings from a survey that elicited weekly reports from women 18-21 years of age on their relationship status, desire to have or avoid a pregnancy, and contraceptive use, considering which young single women want a pregnancy, and what predicts getting pregnant whether or not it is wanted. Edin explores how cultural meanings of babies, condoms, abortion, and pregnancy testing affect contraception and pregnancy among poor women.

40. Thematic Session. At the Frontier of Knowledge about Sexuality
Session Organizer: Guillermina Jasso, New York University
Presider: Guillermina Jasso, New York University
Panelists: Elizabeth A. Armstrong, University of Michigan
David F. Greenberg, New York University
Guillermina Jasso, New York University
This panel examines foundational questions about human sexuality, exploring not only the questions themselves but also the obstacles to theoretical development and empirical testing together with new ways to overcome the obstacles. The questions considered include: What shapes sexual desires, sex drive, sexual behavior, and what is their connection to human development, social inequality, and social development? What are the sources of norms of sexual behavior? And what accounts for variability in all these things across persons and societies as well as within persons and societies over time? The obstacles to the advancement of knowledge about sexuality include: the focus on risk and demographic concerns, the social identities of sexuality researchers, and data deficiencies. New ways to overcome the obstacles include new kinds of data and new models of human sexuality.

Manning Up to Being Gay: Considering Gay
Masculinities Intersectonally. Anthony Christian
Ocampo, California State Polytechnic University
Discussant: Peter M. Hennen, The Ohio State University Research and theory continue to investigate the ways that sexual identities, behaviors, desires, and discourses are mobilized in constructing masculine gender identities and in shaping contemporary systems of power and inequality. Conversely, research also considers the ways that masculinities are relied upon to enact sexual identities, behaviors, desires, and embodiments. This panel will address the new research and cutting-edge theoretical approaches to understanding the complex interplay between masculinity and sexuality. Panelists will address the interrelated processes by which gender and sexuality reciprocally reproduce one another, with a focus on masculinity. The topic is intentionally broad, allowing us to consider scholars working on vastly different projects, but whose work draws on new theoretical frameworks outside of existing sociological investigations of masculinity.

42. Thematic Session. Sex and Sexuality in Black Communities
Session Organizer: Mignon R. Moore, Columbia University
Presider: Mignon R. Moore, Columbia University
Panelists: Averil Y. Clarke, Suffolk University
Celeste M. Watkins-Hayes, Northwestern University
Jeffrey McCune, Washington University-St. Louis
Mignon R. Moore, Columbia University

Sex and sexuality are used to represent multiple images and ideologies of African Americans. Issues of respectability, racial stereotyping, risk-taking and taboo behavior all rise to the fore when analyzing perceptions of and experiences with black sexuality and sexual behavior. The papers in this session examine some of the ways sexuality is understood by individuals and social groups in African American communities. Averil Clarke presents on female sexuality and male gender performance in heterosexual relationships, Celeste Watkins-Hayes analyzes the ways early adulthood relationship experiences of black women shape HIV risk, Jeffrey McCune explores how black men negotiate traditional codes of masculinity while engaging in virtual spaces of same-sex desire, and Mignon Moore examines the intersection of race and gender in the historical development of black LGBT social spaces.

43. Thematic Session. Sexuality in the Workplace
Session Organizer: Christine L. Williams, University of Texas-Austin
Panelists: Adia M. Harvey Wingfield, Georgia State University
Kristen Schilt, University of Chicago
Catherine Connell, Boston University

The workplace is a key site for the reproduction of sexual identities and sexual inequalities. Through routine social interactions, managers as well as workers police the boundaries of acceptable sexual expression. This panel will bring together scholars studying sexuality in a variety of employment settings to explore: how sexual identities and sexual inequalities are created in a variety of work organizations; how gender, race, and class inflect the sexual norms of workplaces; and indeed led to a decline in social mobility? Or are the fears trumped up? A panel of distinguished sociologists and economists present the latest evidence.

Panelists:
Corey D. Fields, Stanford University
Kristin Geraty, North Central College
Celso M. Villegas, Kenyon College
Marina Zaloznaya, University of Iowa

Graduate school concentrates on preparing us to be researchers. However, when you begin that first job, you realize that there’s a lot more to getting tenure than just publishing. How do you balance research with teaching? What are expectations about service and college citizenship? How do you demonstrate that you are an effective advisor? How can you suss out what it means to be a “productive scholar” and an “effective teacher” at your place of work? Questions abound about how to achieve success, and it doesn’t make it easier that expectations in areas of evaluation vary by institutional type, and even by institution. In this workshop, panelists will share insights and give advice on figuring out how to flourish in a first job. We will also leave plenty of time for questions from the audience.

49. Policy and Research Workshop. Interdisciplinary Research and Funding Opportunities and “Big Data” Social Science Opportunities at the National Science Foundation
Session Organizer: Kevin T. Leicht, University of Iowa
Leader: Kevin T. Leicht, University of Iowa
Co-Leaders:
Katherine Meyer, National Science Foundation
R. Saylor Brekenridge, National Science Foundation

This workshop targets graduate students, faculty, and researchers who are interested in interdisciplinary and/or methodologically innovative proposals involving “Big Data.” Representatives from the National Science Foundation (NSF), its research review committees, and grantees will discuss current and new interdisciplinary initiatives at NSF as well as new initiatives for dealing with new data sources popularly associated with the concept of “Big Data.” During the workshop we will also discuss the proposal development process for these initiatives, elements of a competitive proposal, proposal submission and review, and funding opportunities that are especially relevant for sociologists thinking about or conducting interdisciplinary work. The format will be interactive, allowing for audience questions and participation. Attend the Research Opportunities and Data Resources poster session for one-on-one discussions with NSF Program Officers.

50. Teaching Workshop. GIFTS: Good Ideas for Teaching Sociology and for Publishing in TRAILS
Session Organizer: Diane L. Pike, Augsburg College
Leader: Diane L. Pike, Augsburg College
Co-Leaders:
Margaret Weigers Vitullo, American Sociological Association
Jaime Hecht, American Sociological Association

Join TRAILS staff for a workshop experience designed to help deepen participants’ appreciation of the value of publishing in TRAILS for both professional development and improved teaching practice. Walk away with new concrete ideas. Drawing from the expertise of TRAILS authors and subject Area Editors, advice will be shared on how to construct a strong submission—this is, a submission more likely to be published as a resource with relatively little revision. Participants will then collaborate to apply this advice to their particular teaching activities and pedagogical ideas. We hope to spur your follow through with trial subscriptions and specific guidance.

71. Plenary Session. The Politics of Same-Sex Marriage: Public Opinion and the Courts
Panelists: Gregory B. Lewis, Georgia State University; Brian Powell, Indiana University; Verta A. Taylor, University of California-Santa Barbara; Michael C. Dorf, Cornell University.
For better or worse, same-sex marriage has dominated discussions of gay rights in recent years. Public opinion has shifted in a direction favorable to marriage equality, significant social movement resources have focused on preventing or attaining the right of same-sex couples to marry, and an avalanche of court decisions have come down. Panelists will consider public opinion shifts, which social groups favor and oppose same-sex marriage, how social movements have organized and networked for and against same-sex marriage, and the import of recent court decisions.

72. Presidential Panel. Women on the Battlefield: Integrating Women into the U.S. Military
Session Organizer: David R. Segal, University of Maryland
Presider: David R. Segal, University of Maryland
Panelist: General Robert Cone, United States Army

The armed forces have been the only sector of the economy that has been allowed to exclude women from occupations and positions solely on the basis of gender. Two years before the Secretary of Defense instructed the services to gender integrate combat units, General Cone started the Army down that road, and oversaw the process of developing valid and gender-free standards for assignment until his retirement last year. General Cone is a graduate of West Point (where he also served on the faculty), holds an M.A. in Sociology from the University of Texas, and has spent his career in command and staff positions, the latter largely in the area of education and training. In this session, General Cone will make a presentation on the process of gender integration in the military, and answer questions from the audience.

73. Thematic Session. Biology and Sexual Behavior
Session Organizer: Paula England, New York University
Presider: Guang Guo, University of North Carolina
Panelists: Guang Guo, University of North Carolina
Martha McClintock, University of Chicago
Lisa Diamond, University of Utah

Sociologists are increasingly learning from and engaged in debates with biologists. Drawing on recent advances in molecular genetics relevant to human sexuality, Guo will review findings and views of geneticists regarding sexual behaviors of males and females, sex differences, and sexual orientation. McClintock will distinguish five distinct components of sexual motivation: sensorimotor function, sexual attractiveness, sexual salience, sexual receptivity and proactive sexual desire. The roles of biology and social context are different for each. Diamond will take a social neuroendocrinological approach, reviewing research on estrogen-related menstrual cycle changes in desires for same-sex and other-sex partners, and discuss how it offers a new perspective on biological aspects of female sexual orientation.

74. Thematic Session. Networks and Sexual Behaviors
Session Organizer: M. Giovanna Merli, Duke University
Presider: M. Giovanna Merli, Duke University

Interdependent Effects of Cohesion and Concurrency for Epidemic Potential. James Moody, Duke University; Richard Benton, University of Illinois at Urbana-Champaign

Measuring Sexual Networks using Sampled Data. Tyler McCormick, University of Washington

Discussant: Andrew V. Papachristos, Yale University

Sociologists have been developing novel approaches to studying the relationship between social networks and sexual behaviors. These efforts have spanned topics as varied as partnership networks and disease diffusion, statistical models leveraging social network structure to understand sexual behaviors, network-based approaches to recruit samples of hidden and marginalized at-risk populations, and the uses of the internet to collect and analyze social networks data to understand the multiple forms patterns of sexual behaviors. Participants in this session will present cutting-edge research and innovative approaches in the measurement, collection and modeling of social network data to better understand the transmission of STIs and HIV, partnership formation, adolescent sexual behaviors and the study of sexuality in the digital age.

75. Thematic Session. Sex Scandals and their Consequences: Changing Sheets and Changing Paths
Session Organizer: Gary Alan Fine, Northwestern University
Presider: Thomas DeGloia, City University of New York-Hunter College

Weiners Galore: Notes on Scandals in the Age of Sexting. Joshua Gamson, University of San Francisco

Explaining the Scandal Stream. Michael Schudson, Columbia University

Politics, Finance, Scandals - and Sex. Mark D. Jacobs, George Mason University

Signaling Perversion: The Politics of Euphemism and Dysphemism. Gary Alan Fine, Northwestern University; Clare Forstie, Northwestern University

Sex Scandals, both those recent (Monicagate) and those distant (the scandalous Queen Catherine), have the capacity to shape the direction of history. They may redirect the paths on which social order is assumed to operate. When the hidden becomes known, deviance must be tamed in the name of consensual morality. In this session, we examine how sexual scandals, both at the national political level and at more local levels, change discourse, reveal faultlines in society, and potentially alter social arrangements. Even though sexual actions might seem to be private matters, once publicized they have the potential for the reconceiving social and political relations.

76. Special Session. No Fracking Way! Risk, Resistance, and the Mobilization of Protest against Hydraulic Fracking in U.S. Shale Regions
Session Organizer: Anthony E. Ladd, Loyola University-New Orleans
Presider: Anthony E. Ladd, Loyola University-New Orleans

Mobilizing Against Fracking: The Origins and Maintenance of Marcellus Shale Protest in Pittsburgh. Suzanne Staggenborg, University of Pittsburgh

Fracking as a Double-Edged Sword: Differential Responses to Unconventional Energy Development in the Haynesville and Tuscaloosa Shale Communities. Anthony E. Ladd, Loyola University-New Orleans

Fracking on Public Lands: Trickle-Down Neoliberalism in the Utica Shale Region. Sherry Cable, University of Tennessee

The rapid development of unconventional shale oil and natural gas reserves in the U.S. involving horizontal drilling and hydraulic fracturing (“fracking”) has ignited a growing anti-fracking movement that has gained political and cultural traction nationwide since 2008. In shale regions across the country, citizens have mobilized to protest the negative socio-environmental impacts of fracking on their communities, particularly its threats to ground and surface water, roads, air quality, farms, and public health. This thematic session features current research on local resistance, as well as adaptation, to hydraulic fracking in three prominent shale regions of the U.S.

Session Organizers: Jamie Arca, American Sociological Association
Lee Clarke, State University of New Jersey-Rutgers
Authors: William Marsiglio, University of Florida
Kevin Michael Roy, University of Maryland-College Park
Presider: Lee Clarke, State University of New Jersey-Rutgers
Critics: Natalia Sarkisian, Boston College
Andrea Mary Doucet, Brock University
Jennifer Hamer, University of Kansas
What makes a good father? The firsthand accounts in Nurturing Dads show that the answer to this question varies widely and in ways that counter the mainstream “provide and reside” model of fatherhood. Marsiglio and Roy document the personal experiences of more than three hundred men from a wide range of socioeconomic backgrounds and diverse settings, including fathers-to-be, young adult fathers, middle-class dads, stepfathers, men with multiple children in separate families, and fathers in correctional facilities. They find that most dads express the desire to have strong, close relationships with their children and to develop the nurturing skills to maintain these bonds. But they also find that disadvantaged fathers, including young dads and those in constrained financial and personal circumstances, confront myriad structural obstacles, such as poverty, inadequate education, and poor job opportunities. Nurturing Dads asserts that society should help fathers become more committed and attentive caregivers and that federal and state agencies, work sites, grassroots advocacy groups, fathers becoming more committed and attentive caregivers and that job opportunities. Nurturing Dads asserts that society should help structural obstacles, such as poverty, inadequate education, and poor

78. Policy and Research Workshop. NSF Funding Opportunities Merit Review Criteria and Proposal Preparation for Professional Sociologists and Graduate Students
Session Organizer: Patricia E. White, National Science Foundation
Leader: Patricia E. White, National Science Foundation
Co-Leaders: R. Saylor Breckenridge, National Science Foundation
Jennifer Earl, University of Arizona
Kevin T. Leicht, University of Iowa
This workshop targets graduate students, faculty, and researchers who are new at proposal writing and submission. Representatives from the National Science Foundation (NSF), its research review committees, and grantees will discuss the proposal development process, elements of a competitive proposal, proposal submission and review, and funding opportunities for sociological research. The format will be interactive, allowing for audience questions and participation.

79. Policy and Research Workshop. Scrapping the Web: Promises and Pitfalls of “Alternative” Data Sources on Career Outcomes
Session Organizer: John W. Curtis, American Sociological Association
Leader: John W. Curtis, American Sociological Association
Panelists: Hannah Brueckner, New York University-Abu Dhabi
Monica Gaughan, Arizona State University
TBD

80. Teaching Workshop. Ethical Issues in Teaching Session Organizer: Thomas L. Van Valey, Western Michigan University
Leader: Thomas L. Van Valey, Western Michigan University
Co-Leader: Lissa J. Yogan, Valparaiso University
The basic assumption of this Teaching Workshop is that many sociologists have far more experience with the subject of research ethics than they do the ethics of teaching. Indeed, the ASA Code of Ethics does not have a great deal to say directly about teaching. In contrast, the Society for Teaching and Learning in Higher Education (from Canada) does have a nice statement on the ethics of teaching – “Ethical Principles in University Teaching.” Many American sociologists are not likely to be aware of it. The presenters, Tom Van Valey (Western Michigan University) and Lissa Yogan (Valparaiso University), will compare the two statements as a starting point for discussion. In addition, some cases dealing with specific ethical issues in teaching will be presented for examination. Other examples from the participants are welcome. Participants should expect an active session plus resources for further exploration.

107. Thematic Session. Queer Theory (co-sponsored with the Caucus on Transnational Approaches to Gender and Sexuality)

Session Organizer: Stephen Valocchi, Trinity College

Presider: Stephen Valocchi, Trinity College

Panelists: Roderick A. Ferguson, University of Minnesota; Evren Savci, San Francisco State University; Jyoti Puri, Simmons College; Dawne Moon, Marquette University

This panel explores the ways in which queer theory has been taken up by sociologists in the study of sexuality. While sociologists have been quick to incorporate insights about the normative and non-normative alignments of sex, gender, and sexuality from queer theory into their work, we still seem reluctant to seriously engage other aspects of the queer theoretical framework such as the discursive nature of power and its relationship to identity and social subjectivity.

At the same time, sociologists of sexuality and gender have challenged queer theory for its inattention to materiality and its silences about race, ethnicity, and transnational processes. The panelists will discuss the ways they have actually utilized queer theory in their work and how it nourishes as well as limits their understandings of sexuality, anatomical sex, social gender, and other axes of difference.

Sex Hormones, Aging, and the Medicalization of Menopausal Women. Jennifer R Fishman, McGill University
Over the last several decades, cultural battles over sexuality increasingly have been fought in the health care realm. Drug manufacturers, doctors, consumers, and others now “sell” medical diagnoses such as Testosterone Deficit Syndrome and Premenstrual Dysphoric Disorder and medical interventions such as HPV vaccination and circumcision. Others, meanwhile, fight to demedicalize these and other behaviors and conditions. This panel explores the sources, nature, and consequences of the medicalization and demedicalization of sexuality.

110. Special Session. Alpha Kappa Delta (AKD) Distinguished Lecture
Session Organizer: Bethany Titus, Le Moyne College

111. Special Session. CARI Grant
Session Organizer: Brad Smith, American Sociological Association
Presider: Ashley Rondini, Franklin and Marshall College
Panelists: Tony Cheng, Yale University
Brad Smith, American Sociological Association
Rebecca Lorraine Som Castellano, Boise State University
Claudia N. Chauffman, University of California-San Francisco
For over 20 years the ASA has sponsored the Community Action Research Initiative (CARI) grant. This small grant encourages sociologists to undertake community action projects that bring social science knowledge, methods, and expertise to bear in addressing community-identified issues and concerns. During this session CARI grant research and the influence it has had on the local communities will be presented.

112. Special Session. Open Forum on the Shifting Landscape of Higher Education: Envisioning Effective Responses at Individual, Department and Disciplinary Levels (sponsored by the ASA Task Force on Liberal Learning)
Session Organizer: Margaret Weigers Vitullo, American Sociological Association
Panelists: Margaret Weigers Vitullo, American Sociological Association
Edward L. Kain, Southwestern University
Jeffrey Chin, Le Moyne College
The higher education environment is undergoing a period of rapid change along multiple dimensions that have implications for sociology departments and sociology courses in terms of finances, staffing, pedagogy, and delivery of instruction. Three specific contextual changes are examined in this Open Forum: the proliferation of online courses and programs; the increasing scrutiny of employment outcomes in the liberal arts; and the pressure to establish shared essential learning outcomes for undergraduate majors. Developing effective responses to this shifting landscape is vital for institutional well-being and the future of the discipline. This Open Forum will provide an overview of these trends, followed by an active discussion with participants regarding how faculty, departments, and professional associations are currently, or could in the future, address these issues. At the end of the workshop we will have generated lists of potential responses to these changes that will be transcribed and shared with all participants, and will help inform the work of the Liberal Learning Task Force.

114. Departmental Management and Leadership Workshop. Adjunct and Part-Time Faculty: Working Toward Organizational Structures that Support Instructors and Student Success
Session Organizer: Ann Coburn-Collins, Saginaw Valley State University
Leader: Ann Coburn-Collins, Saginaw Valley State University
This workshop will focus on strategies departments can employ to support their adjunct faculty. By the end of the workshop, participants will be familiar with research on adjunct faculty and student success. They will also discover how best to support adjunct faculty to ensure student success and begin to develop their own plans for departmental support. These plans could involve techniques for onboarding, mentoring, departmental inclusion, creation of faculty liaison positions, awards/recognition, etc.

115. Professional Development Workshop. From Dissertation to Book
Session Organizer: Gayle A. Sulik, State University of New York-Albany
Leader: Gayle A. Sulik, State University of New York-Albany
Co-Leaders: Dawn R. Norris, University of Wisconsin-La Crosse
Tristan Bridges, State University of New York-Brockport
In writing an unpublished dissertation, graduate students use a clear methodology to learn about a topic and explain it in a way that advisers will understand and validate. The purpose is to demonstrate skills and abilities to a specific scholarly community. A published book is different. It needs to tell the story of research differently, with fresh insight, clarity, and a new readership in mind. This workshop focuses on how to do that. It outlines: (1) the differences between the dissertation and the book manuscript; (2) the intermediate stages in transforming dissertation research into a full-length manuscript; (3) common barriers to this transformation and strategies to overcome them; and (4) elements of a book prospectus. The workshop will provide informational materials and will include audience Q&A and breakout discussion.

116. Policy and Research Workshop. Discovering How to Get Research Used in the Policy Process
Session Organizer: Patricia E. White, National Science Foundation
Co-Leaders: Roberta M. Spalter-Roth, American Sociological Association
Amy L. Best, George Mason University
Kelly A. Joyce, Drexel University
How does evidence-based sociological research influence policy-making either directly or indirectly? A recent New York Times article remarkng on the overall importance of social science research in the policy process noted, “most striking is the poor showing of sociology, whose relevance to policy makers appears to be minimal, even though it focuses on many of our most pressing problems, including families, crime, education, aging, religion, community, inequality and poverty.” According to the study cited in the article, over the last decade, economists were cited in the Congressional Record, 4.7 thousand times, historians 2.6 thousand times, psychologists 986 times, and sociologist 233 times. Despite this limited identified numerical indicator of the influence of sociologists in the policy realm, many sociologists conduct research that has direct policy relevance and are committed to using that research to inform solutions to societal problems. A 2014 National Science Foundation-sponsored Workshop on Social Science Research and Public Policy organized by George Mason and Drexel Universities explored the contexts, networks, and strategies that can result in the use of social science research in the policy arena. Workshop co-leaders will present a conceptual framework of research utilization and the relationships that facilitate social science research usage in both policy and practice. They will also discuss the pathways that lead to the use of social science research in the policy process, the conditions which enable and constrain the use of social science research, the networks that aid in policy use, and the dissemination strategies that are necessary. The intent of the workshop discussion is present a more realistic interactive model of research use by answering the following questions: 1. What are the usages of social science research in the policy process? 2. Through what strategies, relationships, contexts, or processes does social science research enter the public policy and practice?; and 3. Are there relational strategies that are effective in communicating policy-relevant findings?

117. Teaching Workshop. Teaching about Religion and Sexuality: Online Teaching Resources at theARDA.com
Session Organizer: Roger Finke, Pennsylvania State University
Leader: Roger Finke, Pennsylvania State University
Used by thousands of students each year, theARDA.com has a long list of online features and data files that have been customized for educators and their students (free of charge). The features reviewed in this workshop will include online International Maps and Profiles, GIS services, the Measurement Wizard, QuickLists and QuickStats, and the many features in theARDA.com’s Teaching Tools center. Initially designed as a data archive for researchers studying religion (and still disseminating 50,000+ data files each year), the Association of Religion Data Archives (theARDA.com) is now readily available to a general audience and gives immediate access to the GSS, NES and a long list of other national surveys. TheARDA.com is housed in the Social Science Research Institute at Penn State University, is supported by the Lilly Endowment and the John Templeton Foundation, and was selected by a division of the American Library Association as one of the 30 Best Free Reference Websites in 2010.

136. Plenary Session. Modern Romance: Dating, Mating, and Marriage
Session Organizer: Eric Klinenberg, New York University
Presider: Eric Klinenberg, New York University
Panelists: Aziz Ansari, Independent Actor and Comedian Christian Rudder, OK Cupid
Helen Fisher, State University of New Jersey-Rutgers
Eli Finkel, Northwestern University
When American sociologists initially studied modern romance about a century ago, they discovered that most people were fiercely parochial. Americans generally dated and mated within their hometowns, and in big cities they often married someone who lived within a few blocks. This session explores the transformation of modern romance over the past century, paying particular attention to recent changes related to the Internet, globalization, the rising status of women, the acceptance of non-conventional sexual relationships, and the search for a soul mate. The panelists, who come from inside and outside the academy, will assess how singles manage the expanded options available to them today, and examine emerging attitudes about and experiences in committed relationships and marriages.
