309. Thematic Session. Adolescent Sexualities in Context
Session Organizer: Peggy C. Giordano, Bowling Green State University
Presider: Peggy C. Giordano, Bowling Green State University
Panelists: Ann Meier, University of Minnesota
Peggy C. Giordano, Bowling Green State University
Stephen T. Russell, University of Arizona
Lorena Garcia, University of Illinois-Chicago

Recognizing limits of the “problem behavior” perspective on adolescent sexuality, panel members explore individual, relationship, and broader contextual (school, neighborhood) influences on sexual experiences and their impact on well-being. One panelist explores how these contextual factors matter for understanding later mental health, while another focuses on variability in the character of these experiences (casual sexual experience, involvement in concurrent relationships) as influences on young adult relationship dynamics (including relationship satisfaction, intimate partner violence). Two panelists draw more explicit links to policy: one suggests the need to move beyond the focus on issues of identity and family support to consider how structural conditions (of schools, but also political climate) make a difference for understanding LGBTQ health and well-being. A fourth panelist uses the example of Chicago’s new school-based sex education initiative to highlight ways in which intersections of race/ethnicity, gender, and sexuality necessarily complicate the successful implementation of a broad-based curriculum.

310. Thematic Session. Sexualities in the Penal World
Session Organizer: Megan Lee Comfort, RTI International Presider: Megan Lee Comfort, RTI International
Panelists: Jessica Fields, San Francisco State University
Valerie Jenness, University of California-Irvine
Erin M. Kerrison, University of Pennsylvania
Laura Beth Nielsen, American Bar Foundation and Northwestern University
Jay W. Borchert, University of Michigan
Discussant: Megan Lee Comfort, RTI International

In correctional facilities in the United States, the expression of sexuality is framed as problematic and requiring heavy censorship, and sexual behavior is prohibited and considered as grounds for further punishment. This Thematic Session delves into this repressive environment to illuminate how incarcerated people think about, enact, and manage sexuality. Presenters will explore the questions and insights that arise when conducting participatory sexuality research with women in jail; the challenges facing transgender prisoners as they navigate a highly binary, genitalia-based classification system; how the Prison Rape Elimination Act has in turn eliminated possibilities for consensual sex among prisoners; and the repercussions of formerly incarcerated queer women constructing heteronormative households in an effort to conform to parole officers’ expectations.

311. Thematic Session. Sexuality and Space or Place
Session Organizer: Amy L. Stone, Trinity University
Presider: Eve Ilana Shapiro, University of California-Santa Barbara
Panelists: Japonica Brown-Saracino, Boston University
Amin Ghaziani, University of British Columbia
Amy L. Stone, Trinity University
Katherine McFarland Bruce, Elon University
Discussant: Eve Ilana Shapiro, University of California-Santa Barbara

This panel reflects on the organization of sexualities within different kinds of spaces and places, including ephemeral and transformed spaces. From the Pride parade to the gay neighborhood, this panel considers the role of different spaces in supporting and cultivating sexual cultures. This panel engages with questions of sexuality and space with attention to the ephemerality of some queer spaces.

312. Thematic Session. Where is the Sex in Sexuality Studies?
Session Organizer: Juan J. Battle, City University of New York-Graduate Center
Presider: Juan J. Battle, City University of New York-Graduate Center
Panelists: Gloria Gonzalez-Lopez, University of Texas-
313. Special Session. Audits and Field Experiments
Session Organizer: S. Michael Gaddis, University of Michigan
Presider: S. Michael Gaddis, University of Michigan
Résumé Audits in Unconventional Contexts: Auditing Chinese State-Owned Enterprises and Elite U.S. Law Firms. András Tilcsik, University of Toronto
The Stigma of Place: Choosing a Socially Relevant Definition of Neighborhood in an Experimental Audit Study. Max Besbris, New York University; Jacob William Faber, New York University; Peter M. Rich, New York University

By Any Other Name: Two Experiments to Examine Perceptions of Race and Social Class from Names. S. Michael Gaddis, University of Michigan
Discussant: Raj Andrew Ghoshal, Goucher College
Audit studies and other field experiments allow researchers to make strong causal claims and explore questions that are often difficult to answer with observational data. These experiments have grown in popularity, particularly to examine different types of discrimination, with the rise of online applications for housing and employment. In recent years, sociologists, economists, and political scientists have implemented creative and influential computerized field experiments. However, the learning curve for designing and implementing these experiments online can be quite steep, despite appearing to be a simple and cheap alternative to traditional experiments. In this panel, experienced scholars will share insights from both their success and failures in designing and implementing audits and other field experiments. In addition, the scholars will discuss new techniques and cutting-edge methods in this area.

314. Special Session. Patriarchy Revisited
Session Organizer: Paula England, New York University
Presider: Nancy Folbre, University of Massachusetts
Panelists: Sylvia Walby, Lancaster University
Heidi I. Hartmann, Institute for Women's Policy Research
Nancy Folbre, University of Massachusetts
The concept of patriarchy played a central role in the resurgence of feminist theory in the 1970s and 1980s. Since then, however, use of the concept has waned, discouraged by post-modernist critiques and displaced by new waves of more empirically oriented gender analysis. Panelists will discuss these questions: What does it mean to describe some aspects of economic and social structure as patriarchal? Is the overarching concept of patriarchy still useful for understanding gender inequality? If so, what aspects of patriarchy have the most important effects today and what does this suggest feminist activists and policy makers should focus on? How can scholars analyze differences across space and over time in patriarchal systems embedded in a global capitalist economy?

315. Special Session. Race and Policing Post-Ferguson
Session Organizer: Devah Pager, Harvard University
Panelists: Lawrence W. Sherman, University of Pennsylvania
Nikki Jones, University of California-Berkeley
Jennifer Eberhardt, Stanford University
This session grapples with the issues of race and policing in the post-Ferguson era. How can we understand the individual and organizational processes that lead to fatal encounters between the police and civilians, and how can we explain the disproportionate policing of young black men? How do young men and women of color experience policing in their communities and how do these interactions shape their outlook and sense of opportunity? Drawing on perspectives from criminology, ethnography, and social psychology, our panelists will open a conversation about these pressing social concerns.

316. Special Session. The 50th Anniversary of the Voting Rights Act and the Future of American Democracy
Session Organizer: Jeff Manza, New York University
Presider: Jeff Manza, New York University
Panelists: Frances Fox Piven, City University of New York
Ellen Katz, University of Michigan
Kareem Crayton, Duke University
Pamela Karlan, Stanford University
The right to vote is fundamental in a democratic society, one which gives meaning and power to all other rights. The Voting Rights Act (VRA) of 1965 was a crowning achievement of the civil rights movement, finally establishing the right to vote for all American citizens. Yet the VRA has had a tortured history in the hands of federal courts, partisan legislators and district gerrymandering. More recently, campaigns to restrict access to the ballot for minority and poor citizens have been widespread across America, suggesting that 50 years after its passage the VRA and the right to vote still continues to be a contested question. This panel will discuss the future of the VRA and voting rights in America.

Session Organizer: Tomas R. Jimenez, Stanford University
Author: G. Cristina Mora, University of California-Berkeley
318. Policy and Research Workshop. Conducting Community-Based Participatory Research (CBPR) to Address Health Inequalities
Session Organizer: Ethel G. Nicdao, University of the Pacific
Leader: Ethel G. Nicdao, University of the Pacific
CBPR is an approach to research that involves community-academic partnerships. One of the main tenets of CBPR is that community partners are active contributors to the research process.

The purpose of the workshop is to provide a brief overview of CBPR, and discuss the application of CBPR in social science research.

Panelists (Sonia Bette & Julie Lucero, University of New Mexico; Michael Muhammad, University of Michigan; and Maya Magarati, University of Washington) will share their insights on the rewards, challenges, and limitations of CBPR; considerations of qualitative and quantitative methods; and the role of sociologists in framing the social contexts that emerge in addressing health disparities, improving health status, and health equity. Finally, to encourage audience participation, the workshop will include a small group exercise on using CBPR to define the policy objective related to a specific social problem.

319. Teaching Workshop. Incorporating Disability in Intersectional Pedagogy
Session Organizers: Heather Powers Albanesi, University of Colorado-Colorado Springs
Abby L. Ferber, University of Colorado-Colorado Springs
Leader: Heather Powers Albanesi, University of Colorado-Colorado Springs
Co-Leader: Abby L. Ferber, University of Colorado-Colorado Springs

The teaching workshop is designed for faculty and future faculty who teach about inequalities through an intersectional lens. Disabilities are often the most tangential and marginalized system of oppression and privilege in intersectional courses. As experienced faculty who have long taught about these subjects and value an intersectional perspective, we have engaged in a multi-year process of incorporating disabilities into our own, and our colleagues’ pedagogy. We will discuss the process of curriculum transformation we organized on our campus, insights gained from working with a leading expert in the field of disabilities studies, the development of a graduate certificate in intersectional courses, and the ways in which we have brought disability studies into our own courses, especially our sexuality classes. Afraid you don’t have the expertise, experience or medical knowledge to incorporate disability into your own intersectional pedagogy? This interactive workshop will offer tips and strategies for getting started.

355. Thematic Session. Sexuality Citizenship and Disability
Session Organizer: Allison C. Carey, Shippensburg University
Presider: Allison C. Carey, Shippensburg University

356. Thematic Session. Transgendering Sexual Rights: Lessons from Latin America
Session Organizer: Salvador Vidal-Ortiz, American University

President: Salvador Vidal-Ortiz, American University
Panelists: Alberto Roque Guerra, Cuban Multidisciplinary Association for Sexuality Studies; Gloria Careaga, National Autonomous University of Mexico; Carlos Figari, Buenos Aires University

Discussant: Salvador Vidal-Ortiz, American University
In 2012, Argentina became the first country to legally offer gender identity recognition, based on a person’s self-identification, to transgender people. This did not happen in the global, presumably developed North, but in the chaotic, financially struggling South. Social activists in countries such as Colombia, Cuba, Mexico and Brazil have fought for rights and recognition for transgendered people. Yet this region faces structural forces that lead many transgender women, in particular, to engage in survival prostitution, and give troubling visibility to transgender men. Transgender people face structural vulnerabilities enacted through everyday violence; at the same time, some countries have developed degree completion schools, textile and non-street economies, alternative housing, and centers that train on basic employment skills. Traditional sociological approaches to transgender scholarship can be rethought based on these experiences; the advancements and challenges we see in Latin America are important lessons for an interested US American audience.

357. Special Session. Crossing the Scholar-Activist Line
Session Organizer: Jose Zapata Calderon, Pitzer College
Presider: Mark R. Warren, University of Massachusetts-Boston
Panelists: Patricia Hill Collins, University of Maryland-College Park
Jose Zapata Calderon, Pitzer College
Gregory D. Squires, George Washington University
Veronica Terríquez, University of Southern California
A panel of activist sociologists will present on how activist sociologists can maintain a passion for social justice while ensuring the demands of academia. The presenters will draw on lessons from their roles as scholar-activists with a focus on the arenas in which they work (labor, immigrant rights, community development, global social movement, feminist, communities of color, LGBT communities). Panelists will address new models of research, learning, and practice that are engaging faculty, students, and partners in problem solving to find solutions to community problems; lessons in fulfilling professional academic objectives (e.g. publishing in scholarly journals, getting tenure) while engaging in community-based research; research and practices of developing the classroom as part of the civic realm and that encourage the interconnections between the local and global.

358. Special Session. Gender, Family, and Sexuality in Comparative Perspective
Session Organizer: Janeen H. Baxter, Univ of Queensland
Presider: Matt L. Huffman, University of California-Irvine
Work Flexibility and Work-Family Life of Men and Women in European Countries. Tanja Van der Lippe, Utrecht University
Women’s Labor Market Status, Gender Empowerment and Family Well-Being: Evidence from 1994-2012. Leah Ruppner, University of Melbourne; Belinda Hewitt, University of Queensland; Tsui-o Tai, National Taipei University

Sexual Orientation and Social Disadvantage over the Life Course in Australia and the United Kingdom. Janeen H. Baxter, Univ of Queensland; Francisco Perales, University of Queensland; Tsui-o Tai, National Taipei University
This session features research papers on comparative research on gender, family and sexuality. Two main themes unite them. First, all papers focus on the importance of the institutional environment in shaping individual outcomes in interpersonal relationships, work and family life. Second, the papers are concerned with links between employment and family life as ongoing sources of gender inequality. Van Der Lippe uses recent European data to examine variations in patterns of work flexibility and their impact on family arrangements. Ruppner investigates whether women’s labor market position and gender empowerment at the country-level have differential effects on gender role expectations, gender gaps in housework and work-family strain over time. Wei-Jun provides evidence of changes over time in the level and determinants of gender inequality with reference to China. Finally, Baxter et al. examine whether sexual identity is associated with labor market performance, wellbeing and family relationships in the UK and Australia.

359. Author Meets Critics Session. There Goes the Gayborhood (Princeton University Press, 2014) by Amin Ghaziani
Session Organizer: Verta A. Taylor, University of California-Santa Barbara
Author: Amin Ghaziani, University of British Columbia
Presider: Harvey L. Molotch, New York University
Critics: Andrew Deener, University of Connecticut; Iddo Tavory, New York University; Mary E. Pattillo, Northwestern University

360. Author Meets Critics Session. What Unions No Longer Do (Harvard University Press, 2014) by Jake Rosenfeld
Session Organizer: David Brady, WZB Berlin Social Science Research Center
Author: Jake Rosenfeld, University of Washington
Presider: David Brady, WZB Berlin Social Science Research Center
Critics: Evelyn Nakano Glenn, University of California-Berkeley; Arne L. Kalleberg, University of North Carolina; Kim Voss, University of California; David Brady, WZB Berlin Social Science Research Center

Session Organizer: Andrew Baer, Northwestern University
Presider: Andrew Baer, Northwestern University
Presenters: Simon Balto, University of Wisconsin-Madison; Peter Piho, Duke University; John Hagedorn, University of Illinois-Chicago
Like most big cities, crime is lower now in Chicago than it has been in decades. But violent crime is still endemic to impoverished neighborhoods, as are issues of trust and concerns about lack of police accountability. Chicago also struggles with the legacy of the damage done by notorious police commander Jon Burge and his subordinates, who used torture to elicit confessions from over 100 African American men in the 70s and 80s. This session brings together historians and social scientists who have done path breaking work on police-community relations in Chicago who will discuss their work and implications for policing and race relations more broadly.

362. Professional Development Workshop.
Reviewing for Medical Sociology and Mental Health Journals
Session Organizers: Susan E. Bell, Bowdoin College Virginia Aldige Hiday, North Carolina State University
Co-Leaders: Gilbert C. Gee, University of California-Los Angeles
Gareth Williams, Cardiff University
Elaine Wethington, Cornell University
This workshop is designed for young sociologists to assist them in the important and essential task of professional sociologists, writing manuscript reviews for journals. Editors of three medical sociology and mental health journals will provide suggestions for writing well crafted, informative, critical and helpful reviews (Society and Mental Health, Journal of Health and Social Behavior, Sociology of Health & Illness). The editors will discuss objectivity, criteria for revision recommendations, helpful considerations for authors, time allocations, timely submissions, conflict of interests, and ethics. Sociologists at more advanced stages and in other areas are welcome.

363. Social Media Workshop. Promoting Social Science with Social Media
Session Organizer: Dustin Kidd, Temple University
Leader: Dustin Kidd, Temple University
How can you build and engage an audience for your social science scholarship using social media? This workshop will step through the top social media platforms for sharing your research and promoting your department. We will explore the value of Twitter, Facebook, Google +, WordPress, Tumblr, LinkedIn, Academia.edu, Pinterest, YouTube, and Instagram. We will study the best practices for using social media to reach a wide audience that includes journalists, activists, and policy makers. We also discuss ways that you can incorporate social media into research and teaching practices. Participants can also learn from each other's experiences during the discussion period.

364. Policy and Research Workshop. How to Write a Successful Fund for the Advancement of the Discipline (FAD)
Session Organizer: Nicole V. Amaya, American Sociological Association
Presider: John W. Curtis, American Sociological Association
Panelists: Amy L. Stone, Trinity University
James Michael Thomas, University of Mississippi
Wendy D. Roth, University of British Columbia
The Fund for the Advancement of the Discipline (FAD) program is supported by the American Sociological Association through a matching grant from the National Science Foundation. The goal of the FAD program is to advance the discipline of sociology by funding small (up to $8,000), groundbreaking research initiatives and innovative research conferences. The ASA FAD PI and program manager will give an overview of the program, including its history and what to expect from the funding application and review processes. Three recent award recipients make up the panel and will discuss how they wrote their proposals, what was emphasized, how they built the argument that nod to gender and race is almost universal in environmental sociology courses, we contend that the topics of gender, race and colonialism remain under-theorized within both the scholarly sub-discipline and the classroom. A review of environmental sociology syllabi at the graduate and undergraduate level reveals that 1) discussion of gender, race and colonialism/decolonization are generally brief, 2) when included, concepts of gender, race and colonialism/decolonization are rarely addressed in ways that incorporate the leading theory from these fields, 3) large majorities of the authors assigned for course readings at both graduate and undergraduate levels are white and male, 4) especially when it comes to gender, we notice periodic postings to the Environment and Technology listserv requesting teaching resources. Indeed, while gender and race are at least present, sociological engagement with indigenous experiences or the concepts of colonialism and decolonization are only just beginning. This workshop will provide examples of 3 classroom modules that incorporate key sociological theory with hands on activities. Teaching resources and reading lists on each topic will be included. While this workshop is focused around courses in environmental sociology, material and resources will be presented in a manner to facilitate those teaching courses in gender, race or indigenous perspectives who wish to learn more about how their courses can include the environment.

Session Organizer: Kari Marie Norgaard, University of Oregon
Leader: Kari Marie Norgaard, University of Oregon
Co-Leaders: Emily Huddart Kennedy, Washington State University
Julie Bacon, University of Oregon
While environmental justice has key origins within sociology, and a nod to gender and race is almost universal in environmental sociology courses, we contend that the topics of gender, race and colonialism remain under-theorized within both the scholarly sub-discipline and the classroom. A review of environmental sociology syllabi at the graduate and undergraduate level reveals that 1) discussion of gender, race and colonialism/decolonization are generally brief, 2) when included, concepts of gender, race and colonialism/decolonization are rarely addressed in ways that incorporate the leading theory from these fields, 3) large majorities of the authors assigned for course readings at both graduate and undergraduate levels are white and male, 4) especially when it comes to gender, we notice periodic postings to the Environment and Technology listserv requesting teaching resources. Indeed, while gender and race are at least present, sociological engagement with indigenous experiences or the concepts of colonialism and decolonization are only just beginning. This workshop will provide examples of 3 classroom modules that incorporate key sociological theory with hands on activities. Teaching resources and reading lists on each topic will be included. Session Organizer: Paula England, New York University
Presider: Paula England, New York University
Panelists: Lawrence L. Wu, New York University
Andrew J. Cherlin, Johns Hopkins University
Marcia J. Carlson, University of Wisconsin-Madison
An increasing proportion of American women and men have their first child, and sometimes subsequent children, outside of marriage. The upward trend began more than a half century ago, and is more pronounced among those with who are less privileged. For example, there is almost no such trend among white college graduates. Nonmarital births are typically to couples in relationships or cohabiting unions that break up within a few years, leading to substantial complexity and instability in family patterns. Panelists will consider the trends, social forces encouraging nonmarital births, and their consequences for adults and children.

398. Presidential Panel. Do Heterosexual Couples Avoid Female Superiority and Eroticize Traditionality?
Session Organizer: Paula England, New York University
Presider: Maria Charles, University of California-Santa Barbara
Panelists: Marianne Bertrand, University of Chicago
Sabino Kornrich, Emory University
Christine Renee Schwartz, University of Wisconsin-Madison
The gender revolution has arguably degendered education and careers more than family roles and sexuality. Three panelists present differing views on whether, among heterosexuals, more egalitarian or more traditional gender arrangements encourage couples to get married, stay together, and have more frequent sex. What is the evidence that partners do gender by avoiding marriages in which women earn more, and divorcing when women’s relative status is too high? How do egalitarian or traditional roles affect how often married couples have sex? Is all this changing as women’s superior educational attainment leads more and more couples to feature a wife who is better educated than her husband?

399. Thematic Session. Comparative-Historical Approaches to Sexuality
Session Organizer: Greggor Mattson, Oberlin College
Presider: Greggor Mattson, Oberlin College
Panelists: David John Frank, University of California-Irvine
Jyoti Puri, Simmons College
Amy T. Schalet, University of Massachusetts-Amherst
400. Thematic Session. Former ASA Presidents Reflect on the Study of Sexuality
Session Organizer: Jerry A. Jacobs, University of Pennsylvania
Presider: Jerry A. Jacobs, University of Pennsylvania
Panelists: Cecilia L. Ridgway, Stanford University
Evelyn Nakano Glenn, University of California-Berkeley
Randall Collins, University of Pennsylvania

This session will examine how sexuality scholarship and other fields of sociology can learn from each other. Specifically, what insights from sexuality research might inform our understanding of culture, interaction, evolution, gender, diversity, political movements, social stratification, family, the internet and other important areas of society? And what broad social theories and social trends from outside sexuality research might fruitfully inform sexuality studies? Four former ASA Presidents will take on these broad issues.

401. Thematic Session. Sexuality and Religion
Session Organizer: Elizabeth A. Armstrong, University of Michigan
Presider: Orit Avishai, Fordham University
Panelists: Melissa J. Wilde, University of Pennsylvania
Bernadette Barton, Morehead State University
Roger Friedland, Departments of Sociology and Religious Studies
Janet Afary, University of California-Los Angeles

This panel will explore some of the diverse ways that religious traditions understand, shape and attempt to monitor sexuality. Melissa Wilde examines the ways in which early divisions in the American religious field that seemed connected to sex and gender (e.g. birth control) were really about race and class. Bernadette Barton will discuss the ways in which Conservative Christian attitudes slow the progress of gay rights. In particular, she will discuss the gap between those states with institutional protections for gay people, including marriage, and those that do not even have a state-wide fairness ordinance. Roger Friedland and Janet Afary will discuss Islam, gender and intimacy.

Session Organizer: Mary Bernstein, University of Connecticut

New Destinations within an Old Gateway. Jorge Ortiz, University of Illinois-Chicago

Given historical patterns of settlement, the social science literature on Latino/a migration and incorporation has tended to focus on large urban centers. In the context of the Midwest, specifically, much scholarship on Latino/a experiences has focused on the city of Chicago. Yet, we know that Latinos have long been present in many other communities across the region. Furthermore, the Midwest is a broadly constituted and contested space, a site of ongoing and new migrations from established areas of Latino settlement in other parts of the country, and from Latin America and the Caribbean. Chicago, and a host of other Midwestern cities of various sizes, continue to be configured and reconfigured by the Latino/a presence. Additionally, for the past three decades, growing numbers of Latinos have settled in a variety of suburban and rural communities across the region. This paper session features work on the dynamic landscapes constituted by Latinas/Latinos in the Midwest. We offer work of sociological significance presented within a historical and comparative framework, as a way to deepen our understanding of Latino/a experiences in the Midwest. The Midwest and Chicago are the perfect setting for this conversation, which will highlight: new and persisting challenges, like gentrification, and the challenges (though also opportunities) associated with a growingly heterogeneous Latin@ population; remarkable Latin@ growth in a range of small and mid-size cities across the region (e.g., Omaha, Minneapolis, Des Moines); the browning of the suburbs, and specifically the emergence of Latin@ suburbs; growth of Latin@ populations as a driver for rural population growth throughout the Midwest, and the emergence of and conditions of Latino communities in a range of rural new gateways.

404. Departmental Management and Leadership Workshop. Lessons for Departments and Faculty from the Bachelors and Beyond Surveys: Suggestions for Enhancing Labor Market and Non-Labor Market Outcomes
Session Organizer: Mary Scheuer Senter, Central Michigan University
Leader: Mary Scheuer Senter, Central Michigan University
Co-Leaders: Roberta M. Spalter-Roth, American Sociological Association
Nicole V. Amaya, American Sociological Association

Data gathering for the second NSF-funded, longitudinal Bachelor’s and Beyond surveys – tracing the experiences of a national cohort of 2012 sociology majors during and after their baccalaureate experience has been completed. In this workshop we review key findings regarding the jobs sociology majors have obtained 18 months after their graduation and the strategies that are most likely to lead to career-type employment. In addition, we move beyond a discussion of the labor market outcomes of a college education to explore other ways in which college experiences affect graduates’ lives – including graduates’ satisfaction with their major, their living arrangements, and their civic participation. Workshop participants will be asked to share their experiences working with undergraduates to prepare them both for career success and for the development of meaningful personal and civic lives. We hope both to broaden the discussion of the impact of college on graduates and to prompt a useful exchange on the ways in which faculty and departments have been innovative in preparing students for a full range of meaningful adult experiences.

405. Professional Development Workshop. European Research Council - Funding for U.S. Sociologists (and Elsewhere!) Willing to Explore Ideas or Territories Never Explored Before
Session Organizer: Lionel Thelen, European Research Council
Leader: Lionel Thelen, European Research Council
In Turbulent Times not only banks, institutions, companies or even countries are under pressure but also individuals and, among them, researchers. Studying crisis times can be of the utmost interest for social sciences in general and for sociology in particular. Unfortunately another feature of our hectic times are, in US and in various countries worldwide, financial difficulties to make ends meet as well as limited budgets for universities, research centres and, subsequently, frequent cuts in social sciences research funding. Taking the exact opposite position, the ERC funding capability increases each year and the part of the budget devoted to social sciences has been bettered from 2015 onwards. With funding up to 3.75 million $ for a 5 year project, the ERC has become – in less than 8 years – one of the major funding bodies worldwide and certainly the most generous for Social Sciences and Humanities. "What do the ERC schemes have to offer to sociologists?" "How to get started with an application?" "How to increase your chances to get funding?" "What is the most suitable ERC scheme for me?" These are all relevant questions that will be raised during this workshop. Do not hesitate to bring yours! This session is open to all sociologists aiming to design and lead to their good end ground-breaking research projects. The presentations will be done by ERC Scientific Staff as well as by Grantees and Panel Evaluators. Each presentation will be followed by a Q&A session and presenters will of course be available during the whole duration of the Conference to answer your queries. Flyers, reports and publications will be available to help you inasmuch as possible, not forgetting, last but not least, our website: http://erc.europa.eu/

406. Policy and Research Workshop. Grant Writing for Sociology Students: Disciplinary and Interdisciplinary Opportunities and Strategies
Session Organizer: Dana M. Britton, State University of New Jersey-Rutgers
Leader: Dana M. Britton, State University of New Jersey-Rutgers
Co-Leader: Laura Kramer, Montclair State University
This workshop will focus on effective practices for preparing proposals for funding. We will review recognized strategies for identifying potential funding sources appropriate for various career stages. We will provide an overview of how funding organizations work, discuss how to read calls for proposals or solicitations, how to work on proposals, and how to work on revisions. We will help participants to understand the role of reviewers and decision makers and to bring all of these elements together in crafting the strongest possible proposals.

407. Teaching Workshop. Teaching Sexuality:

Beyond Fundamental Issues
Session Organizers: Amanda May Jungels, United States Army
Elroi J. Windsor, Salem College
Leader: Amanda May Jungels, United States Army
Co-Leader: Elroi J. Windsor, Salem College
Panelists: Mindy Stombler, Georgia State University
Chong-suk Han, Middlebury College
Jason Ronald Orne, University of Wisconsin-Madison
Teaching topics related to sexuality can be challenging for even the most experienced instructors. Students may resist sociological approaches to commonly associated topics and issues, and instructors often deal with complex and sensitive subjects. Past workshops offered at ASA were designed to introduce instructors to teaching sexuality independently or within a general course. This workshop addresses the need for discussion and guidance on advanced issues related to teaching sexuality, including handling sensitive/controversial topics; dealing with student reluctance; managing disclosures in the classroom; creating a sex-positive environment; garnering administrative support; and handling media exposure. Panelists will include a diverse set of experienced instructors with a variety of perspectives and approaches to the subject. The workshop is designed for experienced sexuality instructors who wish to improve their skills, discuss challenges, and share innovations and techniques.

Polyamorous Sexualities: A Feminist and Queer Call for a Sociology of Polyamory. Mimi Schippers, Tulane University
Polyamorous Families with Children. Elisabeth Sheff, Sheff Consulting Group
Discussant: Corie Hammers, Macalester College

In this session we will explore consensual non-monogamies, a range of relationship styles that allow their participants to construct relationships with varied degrees of extra-dyadic romantic and/or sexual interaction. Dr. Teri Conley will critically examine monogamy as “the” ideal relationship configuration, considering how effective monogamy is in structuring family benefits, sexual benefits, relationship satisfaction, and prevention of sexually transmitted infections. Dr. Mimi Schippers will discuss the feminist and queer implications of non-monogamy in explaining the social and political implications of compulsory monogamy and polyamory. Dr. Elisabeth Sheff will provide an overview of the findings of her 15-year study of polyamorous families with children. Pioneers in their field, these researchers have established a solid theoretical and empirical base of information about consensual non-monogamies. Conley’s work on the transmission of sexually transmitted infections reveals that not all forms of non-monogamy are equal, and consensual non-monogamists have lower rates of transmission and higher rates of barrier use than do cheaters. Schippers’s book Polyqueer: Compulsory Monogamy and the Queer Potential of Plural Sexualities (2015) establishes a theoretical framework for identifying how compulsory monogamy reinforces hetero-masculine dominance and the potential for non-monogamists to undermine race, class, and gender inequality. Sheff’s books look at polyamorous families, with The Polyamorists Next Door: Inside Multiple-Partner Relationships and Families (2014) providing a summary of her 15 year study of polyamorous families with children and Stories from the Polycule: Real life in Polyamorous Families (2015) compiling polyamorists’ writings in an edited anthology.

440. Thematic Session. Gender and Sexuality in East Asia
Session Organizer: Travis Kong, University of Hong Kong
Presider: Travis Kong, University of Hong Kong
Panelists: Stevi Jackson, University of York-United Kingdom
Travis Kong, University of Hong Kong
Pei-Chia Lan, National Taiwan University
Lee Nayoung, Chung-Ang University

A profound transformation in personal lives has taken place in East Asia in the past few decades. This panel takes a critical stance to understand the changes of sexuality, gender, marriage, and/or family in Hong Kong, China, Taiwan, and Korea. Stevi Jackson will challenge the hegemony of Western theoretical perspectives on gender, sexuality, and intimate relationships and urge for the need of East Asian alternatives. Travis Kong will discuss the changing romantic scripts of Chinese masculinity through men who buy commercial sex in Hong Kong and China. Lan Peichia will discuss how the changing scripts of cultivating middle-class children in Taiwan have intensified the gender division of parenting labour across the divergent practices of childrearing. Lee Nayoung will focus on the newly emerged debates around anti-prostitution laws in South Korea by mapping out the dynamics of women’s movements and the changes in government policy.

441. Thematic Session. Sexual Fields
Session Organizer: Adam Isaiah Green, University of Toronto
Presider: Lisa Renee Miller, Indiana University-Bloomington
Panelists: Adam Isaiah Green, University of Toronto
Omar A. Lizardo, University of Notre Dame
Margaret Frye, Princeton University
John Levi Martin, University of Chicago

Recently, scholars of sexuality have turned to Bourdieu and field theory to make sense of collective sexual life and its unique social organization. In this stream of research, the specialized arenas of modern sexual life—from the neighborhood coffee shop to the global Internet dating site—are conceived as sexual fields, each possessing their own particular socio-demographic composition and status order. This thematic session will explore the turn to sexual field theory, including its theoretical underpinnings and its capacity to illuminate the social foundations of sexual desire and desirability. Here, panelists will consider what field theory has to offer the study of sexuality, including how the structures of race, class, gender and nationality materialize in systems of sexual stratification but, also, how the study of sexuality may shed light on Bourdieusian field theory.

442. Thematic Session. The Impact of Agnes: Reflections on Garfinkel's Notion of the Managed Achievement of Sex and Gender
Session Organizers: Thomas DeGloma, City University of New York-Hunter College
Robert Dingwall, Nottingham Trent University
Presider: Thomas DeGloma, City University of New York-Hunter College
The Turn from What to How: Garfinkel's Reach Beyond Description. Sarah Fenstermaker, University of Michigan
Transcribing Gender. Jodi O'Brien, Seattle University
Imagining Agnes. Kristen Schilt, University of Chicago
Discussant: Robert Dingwall, Nottingham Trent University
Harold Garfinkel’s (1967) influential study, “Passing and the Managed Achievement of Sex Status in an ‘Intersexed Person’,” provides one of the earliest sociological interpretations of sex and gender as products of collaborative social interaction. This study has influenced scholars working in a variety of traditions including symbolic interaction, cultural and cognitive sociology, the sociological analysis of autobiography, conversation analysis, the sociology of the body, and the interdisciplinary field of sex/gender/sexuality studies. This session will illustrate the influence of Garfinkel’s study of Agnes. Participants will discuss the impact of Garfinkel’s ideas on notions of sex/gender performance, issues pertaining to sexuality and sexual orientation, the social construction of sex/gender, and the achievement of sex and gender in symbolic, social interaction. Participants will highlight areas of their own research that advance Garfinkel’s ideas. They will also highlight new areas of research inspired by the study of sex, sexuality, and gender as everyday accomplishments.

443. Author Meets Critics Session. Social Democratic America (Oxford University Press, 2014) by Lane Kenworthy
Session Organizer: Michael Hout, New York University
Author: Lane Kenworthy, University of California-San Diego
Critics: Jeff Manza, New York University
Monica Prasad, Northwestern University
Philip Mehrtens, Max Planck Institute for the Study of Societies

444. Regional Spotlight Session. Urban Culture and Public Life in Chicago
Session Organizer: David Grazian, University of Pennsylvania
Presider: David Grazian, University of Pennsylvania
Presenters: Nicole Gonzalez Van Cleve, Temple University
Japonica Brown-Saracino, Boston University
Black Hawk Hancock, DePaul University
Chicago has long served as a central site for the sociological study of urban culture and public life. In this Spotlight Session, we will discuss how race relations unfold in Chicago’s public spaces; neighborhood gentrification and the ecological landscape of the LGBT community; and the city’s vibrant scenes of urban entertainment, nightlife, and cultural consumption. In doing so, we will emphasize Chicago’s distinctiveness as well as its persistent ability to highlight larger social forces operating in American metropolitan life more generally.

445. Professional Development Workshop. Before and After Retirement
Session Organizer: Scott G. McNall, California State University-Chico
Leader: Thomas L. Van Valey, Western Michigan University
Co-Leaders: Scott G. McNall, California State University-Chico
Susan B. Prager, City University of New York-Brooklyn College Emeritus
Retirement can be a rewarding experience; however, people need to plan on what they are retiring TO as well as what they are retiring FROM. Both pre- and post-retirement issues such as partner expectations, community and intellectual engagement, and lessons learned will be engaged. The results of two membership surveys conducted prior to the annual meeting will be incorporated into and discussed during the workshop.

446. Policy and Research Workshop. Introduction to the German Socio-Economic Panel Study (SOEP) – Practice, Problems and Analytical Potentials of Longitudinal Household Surveys
Session Organizer: Marco Giesselmann, German Institute for Economic Research
Juergen Schupp, German Institute for Economic Research
Leader: Marco Giesselmann, German Institute for Economic Research
This Workshop responds to the raising relevance of longitudinal data in empirical sociological practice. This relevance largely stems from ongoing debates on causality and the increasing interest in empirical life-course approaches. The workshop is directed at researchers, who currently carry out studies with longitudinal data, are planning to do so, or are involved in methodological discourses. Thereby, the workshop focusses on one of the most important and longest running household panel surveys; the German Socio-Economic Panel Study (SOEP). The workshop starts with an introduction into the SOEP. The main focus here is on the content, structure, organization and documentation of the data. In the second, major part of the workshop, we want to discuss with some invited experts and the auditorium about the current empirical practice of household panel data and recent methodological developments. Concretely, we will discuss - how data from socio-economic household panels is actually (re-)used in sociological practice. - what we can and cannot do in the context of international comparisons on the basis of existing and similar, country-specific household panels (like the SOEP, PSID, HILDA and Understanding Society). - how the usage and methods of panel data can be motivated and taught to students.

447. Teaching Workshop. A Little Sex: Teaching about Sexualities Across the Curriculum
Session Organizer: Rebecca F. Plante, Ithaca College
Leader: Rebecca F. Plante, Ithaca College
Co-Leader: Cedrick-Michael Simmons, Boston College
This workshop addresses how to teach about sexualities beyond the ‘Sociology of Sexuality’ class. Such courses fill with students keen to learn a lot about sexualities. But nonspecialists may wonder how to incorporate sexualities modules or units into other courses (e.g., introductory sociology; family; social psychology; research methods; media; culture; youth cultures; social movements). Current, relevant issues abound, such as hooking up ("casual" sex), online pornography, and sexting. Media courses could include global ads using sex to sell, or a module on sexting, technology, and consent. Introductory courses could include a module on hooking up, heterosexuality, and gender. This workshop will enable participants to include current sociologically relevant sexualities topics in ways that expand students’ sociological imaginations. Participants will: (1) receive resources and links for teaching about sexualities; (2) learn specific techniques for discussing sexualities in nonsexualities courses; (3) discuss content, techniques, and approaches; (4) gather and share creative ideas about which kinds of topics are most applicable for which kinds of courses. For example, sexuality content/modules in a research methods course would differ from those in a media course. The intended audience is professors at all levels who wish to learn more about how to include sexualities in other sociology courses.

448. Student Forum Workshop. Ten Things I Wish I Knew in Graduate School: Advice from Assistant Professors

482. Plenary Session. Internet Dating
Session Organizer: Paula England, New York University
Presider: Paula England, New York University
Panelists: Elizabeth Bruch, University of Michigan
Jennifer Hickes Lundquist, University of Massachusetts-Amherst
Michael J. Rosenfeld, Stanford University

Using internet dating sites to find partners is now completely mainstream. Panelists will consider the sociology of how this system works. Two panelists will use their access to data from internet dating sites revealing what groups are on the site and who contacts and responds to whom. One panelist will show how race affects who is contacted or responded to among those seeking same-sex or other-sex partners. Another panelist will use new methods to uncover what people are looking for in partners, and how market constraints shape people’s search and contact strategies. Another panelist will report on a survey ascertaining which groups are more likely to have used the internet to find partners, and will put internet dating into a broader historical perspective focusing on macrosocial trends affecting mate choice and family formation.
